The 900-day siege of Leningrad by the Germans, from September 8, 1941 till January 27, 1944, was one of the most dramatic episodes of the World War II and certainly the most tragic period in the history of this city. The collection offered by East View includes four unique, formerly classified books, describing various stages of the battle for Leningrad. These books were published during 1943 to 1953 and are in fact unknown to military historians.
