Lion Art Digital Archive

Influential art journal from Taiwan

During the late 20th century, Lion Art was the most sought-after platform in Taiwan for artists, critics, and intellectuals who were enthusiastic to share their opinions through the arts. This leading art journal not only documented people's thoughts and reactions during and after the period of martial law (1949-1987), but also nurtured many art masters and influential figures in the fields of art and humanities in Greater China for a quarter of a century. Lion Art's mission was to enrich the Chinese arts field by introducing avant-garde concepts from the Western world and supporting emerging artists from Taiwan. The journal was diverse and significant in its contribution to the arts and provides critical primary source materials for researching Asian arts and humanities, as well as various facets of the turbulent history of Cross-Strait relations during the 20th century. Lion Art Press, publisher of Lion Art, has been the dominant brand in the art publishing industry in Taiwan since 1971, and its prestigious publications continue to enjoy great influence in the field of Taiwanese arts and culture.
