

English Reader makes it possible to:

- Access pre-translated content in clear, academic-style English, with preserved formatting (footnotes, tables, headings, etc.)
- Search bilingually, viewing highlighted English results in context and switch back to the original Russian or Chinese with a click
- Unlock insights for non-Russian or non-Chinese speakers, driving greater usage across your institution

- Entire archive pre-translated into English

- English text displayed alongside original language text

East View's English Reader dramatically increases translation capacity, accessibility, and efficiency—bridging linguistic barriers for research communities worldwide.

Why English Reader?

For more than 30 years, East View has supplied universities and researchers with specialized resources in vernacular languages from regions like Russia, Asia, and the Middle East. Previously, only those fluent in the languages of these regions could fully utilize these materials.

But now, with advancements in AI-driven translation technologies and the rise of Large Language Models, translations are more accurate and fluent than ever. We view this as an ideal moment to leverage these tools to expand access to our extensive archives, allowing users to browse, search, and read non-English materials in English, thereby opening up these valuable resources to a much wider academic community.

Current English Reader resources include...

Russian dailies

- Nezavisimaya gazeta, 2008–
- Pravda, 2023–
- Rossiiskaia Gazeta, 2008–

Military newspapers

- Krasnaia Zvezda, 2005–
- Jiefangjun Bao (PLA Daily), 1956–

Scholarly journals

- Iskusstvo Kino, 1931–2023
