

Turkmenskaia Iskra Digital Archive

Founded in 1924 in Ashgabat, Turkmenskaia iskra (Туркменская искра, The Turkmen Spark, a derivative of the Vladimir Lenin founded newspaper Iskra) was a Russian-language broadsheet newspaper and the official party organ of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Turkmenistan.

As a republican newspaper of record, it was responsible for proliferating the Soviet central government's, as well as the local administration's, public announcements and pronouncements, party deliberations, policy initiatives, etc., reflecting the government's positions on a wide variety of issues. As one of the most widely circulated and influential Turkmen newspapers of its time, it also regularly featured columns dedicated to sports, local culture, literature, and the arts.
