About Iskusstvo kino

With more movie screens than any nation at any time, the Soviet Union's cinematic legacy helped shape the artistic and social agenda of the socialist world for most of the Twentieth Century.

Iskusstvo kino, founded in 1931, chronicled that cinematic legacy with its devotion to art in Russian film.

Renowned as one of Russia's premier journals of cinema, Iskusstvo kino offers more than Russian and foreign movie reviews, articles on filmmaking and cinema culture, criticism, and essays. Iskusstvo kino traces Russian arts and culture from the 'socialist realism' era — when film became the prime propaganda tool ("agitki") for instilling Communist fervor in the masses — all the way through contemporary filmmaking.

A monthly publication from 1931–1941, Iskusstvo kino went on hiatus during World War II and then was published irregularly during 1945–1947 and bimonthly during 1947–1951 before resuming monthly publication in 1952.

A core journal in film studies, especially for scholars in Russian and Soviet cinema, and a real boon for scholarship in the field.

Гордость

Автор: С. Эйзенштейн

Проф. С. Эйзенштейн

Заслуж. деятель искусств

Нам, взявшим на свои плечи разрешение судеб человечества, не пристало стесняться собственной гордости.

Нам пристало реабилитировать понятие гордости.

Не малое тщеславие, не пошлую самолюбивость, не извигное самовославление отдельных мажорных самолюбий.

А хорошую полновесную, полнокровную, положительную гордость.

Гордость кляса, который с каждым днем, с каждым годом, с каждым гинетием своих побед по-хозяйски отмечает свои достижения на страницах мировой истории.

Итак: за Гордость!

И сегодня—гордость за двадцатипятилетнюю работу советского кино!

Новое учебное содержание,
новые формы воплощения,
новые методы теоретического осмысления - вот что поразило зарубежного зрителя в советском
